

FINAL

S PRICE ONE CENT.

BROADWAY PANIC CAUSED BY AUTO THAT RUNS WILD.

Skids Sideways Between Seventeenth and Nineteenth Streets, Endangers Many Lives, Destroys a Store Entrance and Crashes Into a Car.

WOMAN WHO OCCUPIED THE MACHINE INJURED.

She Said She Was Mrs. Coates, but Refused to Give Her Address—Boy Who Was Passing Was Also Hurt.

A runaway electric coupe ran wild on Broadway this afternoon, backed up, skidded sidewise and endangered lives between Seventeenth and Nineteenth streets, incidentally injuring two persons, destroying the front door of the entrance to the W. & J. Sloane carpet house at the Nineteenth street corner, breaking all the windows in a Broadway car and causing panic.

One of the injured was a richly-dressed woman who was in the coupe during its frenzied performance. She gave the name of Mrs. Coates, but refused her address.

The automobile, under control of Chauffeur James Derrig, was

The automobile, driven by James Morris, was engaged at the stables of the New York transportation Company by Mrs. Coates for a shopping tour. She spent some time in the Sloane store and gave Morris an order as to his future movements as she entered the vehicle upon leaving.

Morris turned on the power and got ready to turn up Broadway. The coupe did not move. He tinkered with the levers and pushed down on his seat to assist in examination of the machinery below the running gear.

Two marble steps leading to the Sloane entrance, grazing a marble pillar and smashing in the great plate glass front door, this crash was heard all over the store and a bewildered customer and clerks joined in the search for safety. It so seemed that the car had Suddenly the coupe jumped a few feet in the air, rattled round and charged across the street, bringing up behind the curb with a jar that threw Mrs. Coates against the front window. For a moment the coupe quivered as if in hesitation and then it started down Broadway.

How it dived in and out among street cars and vehicles nobody can explain. It appeared to be endowed with more intelligence than the ordinary chauffeur. Reaching Seventeenth street without mishap the coupe stopped again.

Dorris had been chasing it. As the vehicle stopped he grabbed hold to climb the other side of the car. A whirling monstrosity of the machinery came to a final stop.

Mrs. Coates was carried from the vehicle to the store and an ambulance was called from New York Hospital.

Two surgeons arrived with the assistance. One attended to Mrs. Coates, the other to Dorris.

Big Crowd Assembles.

to his seat and Mrs. Coates started to open the door to jump out. Before either the chauffeur or the passenger could get the automobile began to back up.

I ran faster backwards than it had head on and again made some remarkable escapes, dodging dodging, dodging, dodging.

At the Manhattan region of the city, where I had passed through the shopping district and thousands of people were about the corner of Ninth street and Broadway. The widest sidewalks were flooded in the crowd and business was suspended for a moment around until the ambulance departed and the policemen went back to their posts.

As I came by, I saw several

After a moment of repose it backed up in a curve and started ahead at full speed climbing the sidewalk and

HIGHLANDERS AT WASHINGTON.

(Continued from Sixth Column.)

Sixth Inning—Dougherty singled. Keeler sacrificed. Elbert

Seventh Inning—Conroy flied out. Chase singled. McGuire flied to Jones. Clarkson hit to Townsend. No runs.

Eighth Inning—Dougherty fanned. Keeler singled. Elberfeld was hit. Williams forced Elberfeld. Anderson's trip

At Chicago (A. L.)—End ninth: St. Louis, 0; Chicago, 0.
At Cincinnati—End sixth: Pittsburg, 5; Cincinnati, 3.

At St. Louis (N. L.)—Chicago, 5; St. Louis, 9.

♦♦♦

LATE RESULTS AT MEMPHIS.

Sixth Race—Sanction (8 to 1) 1. SCHOOLCRAFT (3 to 1)

SIXTH RACE—MISS MARION (4 to 1) 1, SARNER (20 to 2), HOBSON'S CHOICE (4 to 1) 3.

1) 2, SECOND MATE (50 to 1) 3.
